About This Game

We believe that the power of VR can help solve real world issues by putting you into other people's shoes. Or in this particular case, a wheelchair. Experience the world from the different perspective and help us battle inaccessibility in Ukraine!

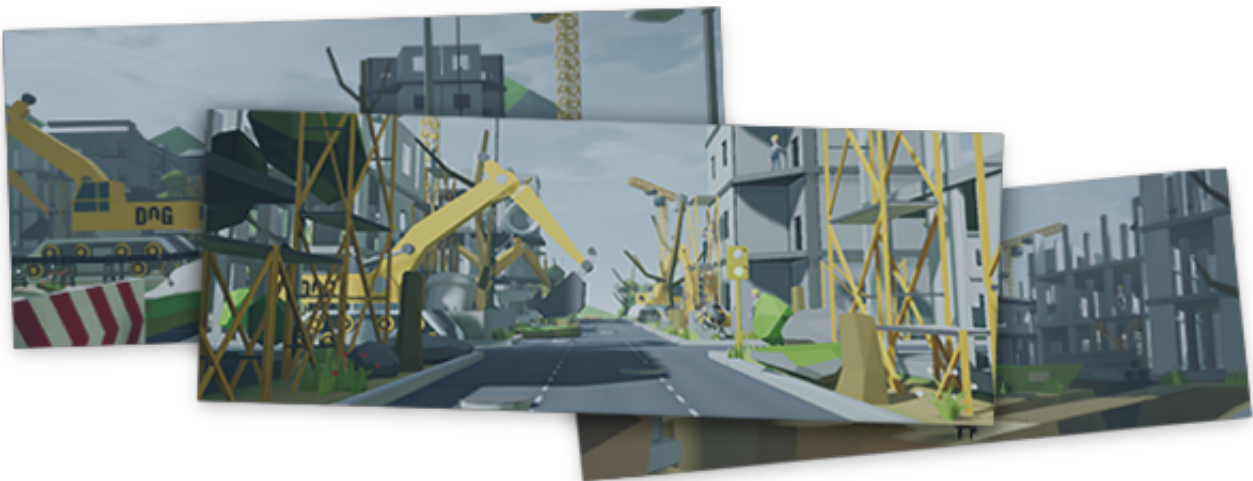

Features:

- True story and interactive narration

The story is written and voiced by (the very much real) Dmytro Schebetyuk who suffered spinal injury that bound him to wheelchair but hasn't stopped him from having a full life. He shares his thoughts, cracks jokes and sarcastically comments on your actions and failings.

- Unique locomotion system
Push the wheels with your hands and try to keep balance of the wheelchair in VR. Turns out it's even harder than it looks!
- Wacky gameplay
The game does not focus on disability but rather on fun situations being in wheelchair puts you in.
- Charity cause
Profits from the game are donated to Dostupno UA initiative that supports accessibility programs and films video blogs about infrastructure and life of people with disabilities in Ukraine.

wheelchair simulator vr

this is my favorite expansion for race 07, it adds a lot of really nice touring cars (including the amazing volvo 850!) 2 types of camaro's (gen4 and gen5), and, 6 race tracks i cant pronounce at all but are really fun to drive on and provide alot of close racing. did i say it has the volvo 850?. Before starting, know I will avoid any story specifics or spoilers.

I got The Invisible Hours as part of a bundle and went in having no idea what it was about beyond being some sort of mystery/detective game. Right off the bat, I was a little disappointed by the fact that it seemed to be more of a movie than an actual game. That disappointment evaporated as I played - well watched - through it.

So, how does this work?

Since it's an interactive story more than a game, there are few interactions. You can't interfere with the characters or affect how the story unfolds in any way and are just along for the ride. That being said, you do have things you can collect in the game that help fill in some details on the characters and what was going on before the story takes place. You also have complete control over how you watch the story by positioning yourself wherever you want (even in an area where there are no characters or anything of note to see), as well as have some basic play controls (play, pause, fast-forward, rewind), and the ability to pick up and inspect items in the game - some of which are integral to understanding the whole story.

I quickly realized the potential that stories like this have in a game; especially in a VR setting. Following characters around as they were up to no good as a silent, watchful eye was entertaining. I would watch them lie to each other one minute, and have side deals going on the next. It was great to see the story unfold and it is impossible to catch all of the details without rewinding; any many times there are multiple important interactions going on between characters.

I initially had some reservations that once I saw the story unfold from one character's perspective (you can freely move throughout the game, you aren't tied down to one character or even one place), the story would more or less be spoiled and, while I could see the story from the others' perspectives, I would already know what happens. I could not have been more wrong. The story continued to grow in complexity as I watched each character's point of view. It was really interesting to see a character behave one way, only to discover the reason for that motivation later when I was replaying a scene from their perspective. As stated at the beginning, I won't go into specifics, but there are several great twists and turns in the story and I was shocked at things that were happening all the way through my playtime.

Technical Stuff

I played the game in VR on a Vive and used the motion wands for all controls. The game supports teleport to move (and nothing else that I could see) and it works well. I never felt like I needed to be able to have split-second timing or that the teleport wasn't allowing me to stay engaged in the story or keep up.

Duration

If you just sit and watch the story unfold, I would imagine it can be done in 30-45 minutes. Watching the point of view from all characters and seeing the whole story, however, is more in the 5-6 hour range. It took me a little over 7 hours to watch everything as well as get all of the collectibles and achievements.

Who is this game for?

This game is slower paced and for people looking for a fun story more than game play. I found it requires a comparable mindset to a point & click style adventure game (minus the puzzle aspect, though I guess you could argue the puzzle is piecing together the story as you watch).. I really like this game. true it doesn't feel finished but i still really like it. it isn't that expensive either. i hope the devs finish the game. its a survival game in space there are no jumpscares. i find it relaxing combing through a ship or station looking for resources. there is a lot to do you have to like the grind build your base to ridiculous proportions find reserch points to level up skills. and i found an easy solution for the lock problem you have to look at them from the side the rings are in a cone shape formation. oh and don.t have to many items in physical inventory or the game starts to lag (i only had promblems after i had over 100+ items in physical inventory). still i can handle te bugs but i do hope the game wil get a polishing soon.. This is actually one of my new favorite strategy games. I have the board game too although this version i like much more as i dont have to constantly check the rules. Too bad out of 50 games, about 20 of them ran into game breaking bugs where you just cannot continue and your locked into a screen and have to close the game and reboot to continue. Gets old after a dozen times of rebooting. Great game though. Hope they patch it soon.. The games that launched 1000's of weeaboos wetdreams, just more profits off cards for the rest of us.

Nice little game. Bit too short in my opinion so not really worth the money if im honest. Not enough exploration and certainly not long enough to really get in to. Not really challenging but still a good little game. I have to say, I was surprised about this one, personally I thought it was a lot of fun. I have cloudlands golf and the 2 are totally opposite. This one I think is more like the miniature golf courses I used to take my kids to. Cloudlands is definitely more of a challenge than this one but I think it is worth the money. The only issues I have is, each course only has 9 holes, hopefully they will add 18 for each course. Looks really good.. I love this application. Hope that through networking with overseas friends to experience the Visual and musical arts. Certainly, we hope that you can hear your own music library.

Very good game to introduce new people to VR.

Nice tactical gameplay and fast-paced.. THIS GAME IS FOR LITTLE KIDS GO PUT THIS ON A KID WEBSITE!! :}. Can't recommend, it was so buggy I wasn't able to play it despite trying for 3h. If you must go for it, watch the refund counter.. I just do not like this.. Oh my gosh I had a blast with this game. It runs well, and despite being very repetitive, it seems like just messing with the magic and potions makes things more fun. It's the most amazing thing, I love it. Also, troll mode is a heck of a lot of fun to mess with people. I'd recommend this game 100% before they charge money for it, if they do, it's one of the best VR games out there. Plus, who doesn't like feeling all fantasy and mystical sometimes? 10/10, especially if they add new magic and potions.
